

POETRY CHALLENGE 5: COLOUR POEMS

This week's challenge is to write a poem about colours. What do different colours mean to you? Complete the poem below to make a colour poem. Don't worry about rhyme for this one, but see if you can get descriptive. Writers don't always use the first thing they think of when working on descriptions, because often our early ideas are too obvious and not very interesting. So see if you can come up with different ideas for each colour. Or you could write your poem along a theme (e.g. each colour is a different emotion, or a different type of animal, or something you like to eat, etc.)

Feel free to add extra colours too!
